Equitable Earth Day

We are proud to announce Cecilia Jastrzemska as the keynote speaker for our Earth Day 2025 event, themed Equitable Earth Day, on Monday 28th April at 6:30 PM BST.

Cecilia is a Senior Policy Advisor (Director level) with the UK Government, and the Founder of European Movement Women UK. She chairs the EU-UK Stronger Together Network and is an award-winning public speaker, feminist advocate, and published political journalist. Her work spans climate policy, AI ethics, European affairs, and gender-based violence (MVAWG), and she was shortlisted for CogX's Tech Regulation Award for her leadership in mitigating algorithmic bias.

Speaking on World Environment Day 2021, Cecilia highlighted Covid-19 as a catalyst for a green revolution and called for multilateral cooperation to hold major polluting corporations accountable. She champions the idea that climate action is no longer dictated solely by policymakers but is a global social movement driven by justice and innovation. https://youtu.be/C1-ngjTWsD0?si=sIX5pkcT76dlch_Q.

A fierce critic of fossil fuel sponsorship at climate summits, she argues these vested interests undermine real progress.

Cecilia's work is a powerful reminder that sustainability must be fair, inclusive, and rooted in systemic change.

Planetary boundaries were initially proposed by the Stockholm Resilience Centre. There are 9 terrestrial processes that enable the habitability of the Earth for the human species. Planetary boundaries are the thresholds beyond which the process is significantly disrupted. Climate change is one, ozone depletion is another.
